Introduction

This book is a compilation of names of winds and rains that have been indexed according to place names. This is not a complete listing and there are many more sources (Sites of O‘ahu, Sites of Maui, Unwritten Literature, Hawaiian language newspapers, songs, etc.) to research. The three sources used in this book were:

Nak. Nakuina, Moses K., ed. n.d. Moolelo Hawai‘i o Pakaa a me Ku-a-pakaa. Hamilton Library, University of Hawai‘i. Privately printed. [probably early 1900s]

The references after each entry will lead the reader to the source and the page number where the information was collected.

How to choose if there is more than one entry?
Look at the references. The more references, the better the choice.

What does the question mark[?] mean?
The question mark [?] means that the author is unsure of the spelling of that word.

Why are some of the names of winds and rain the same?
The winds seem to bring the rains.

Why there are very little entries for rain names?
Not all areas are wet. The rain names collected are nearly always in wet coastal areas.
